Book Reviews

Would you like to write a short book review to be hung on the CAL webpages? Do you know of a book that tackles interesting leadership issues that deserves to be brought to the notice of a wider audience? How about reviewing a book that the CAL recommends? We are looking for short book reviews (approx. 500 - 1000 words) that will be made available to all which shines a light on leadership questions and stimulates debate. If you do not have a copy of the book in question, the CAL will source one for you which will become yours to keep. For further details, please email us. If you are interested in writing a CAL Leadership Insight, you might want to take a look at our Leadership Insight Submission Guidelines.

CAL Update

It's here and available for use now! We're talking of course about the CAL's first Leadership Development Pack 'What Leaders Do'. The pack will allow you to deliver an outstanding session of leadership CPD to your unit by provoking thought and interaction around the Army's Leadership Model and how its use can deliver better personal and team outcomes. The second pack 'What Leaders Are' is currently under construction for release in the Autumn. More to follow!

Another outstanding resource is the video of the recent presentation by Maj Gen Paul Nanson (Director Leadership), via AKX or YouTube, on the current state of Army leadership and his vision for its future. Filmed as part of our Speaker Series, the video allows retrospective viewing at a time of your unit's choosing. Why not use it as a vehicle to discuss what leadership might look like in your unit's future as its role and structure adapts to a changing operating environment.

The last of our fantastic offerings to update you on is the upcoming CAL 2018 Annual Leadership Conference at RMAS on 8 Nov. Focused on the topic of 'Successfully Leading through Change', the Conference will allow access to some excellent speakers from a variety of sectors offering their perspectives on the recipe for success. The Conference will be a much more inclusive event this year with up to 550 free places up for grabs. Details will be released shortly on how you and members of your unit can be in the audience. Don't miss out!
